From our All-School Assembly, February 28, 2024 Nell Dailey

"On this rainy day in February, I want to share a story with you. So sit back, put your phones away, and give me your attention.

Trish Friesland, some of you might know her from CRMS, shared with me a great word: FARCH. It sounds like a swear word, but it isn't. That is what makes it so fun to say. It is the time period of February and March and it can be a tough time. There are 1,000 shades of brown, we are concluding winter sports and spring sports haven't started which switches up some social stuff. It can feel - Farchy."

Assemblies bring the whole school and staff together for a variety of reasons: to celebrate accomplishments in and out of school, to announcing the activities available in which to participate, a shared experience with speakers or games, and sometimes it is used as a way to address the student body when things are hard.

During this assembly, we addressed Farch. Then I shared a story of when I was in high school, feeling down. A classmate, not a friend, teammate, or someone I am in touch with now, stopped me in the hallway to share a new song she heard that reminded her of me. It was a kindness, a small act that made me feel seen at a time when I wasn't that confident in myself.

Students have stopped me in the hallway to share they can feel Farchy or feel the effects of March on their energy, positivity, and focus. Adolescents are big feelers and if those feelings are dreary teens may show us in strange ways: avoidant, glum, angry, depressed or hyperactive, distracted, speedy. Luckily, the strategy I shared with the students at the assembly helps to lift the Farchy Feeling.

"This brings me to share a school-wide optional activity for FARCH: Rainbow in the Clouds. Dr. Maya Angelou talks about being a Rainbow in someone's cloud using lyrics from a 19th-century African-American song: "When it looked like the sun wasn't gonna shine anymore, God put a rainbow in the clouds." When we have difficult times or clouds, there are people around us who are there to help. These are the rainbows. Dr. Angelou shared in this video, that she brings with her the rainbows she has received so that she can be a rainbow to someone else."

CHRS has a Rainbow in the Clouds growing everyday. On it, are sticky notes answering the following questions: What can you do to help someone else? How can you be a rainbow? Or if it makes more sense to you, write down what you would need from someone to help you through this dreary time of year. How can you find a rainbow when you need one?

Farch is a good time to lift people up and be a rainbow in someone's cloud.
Be well,
Nell

Quebec City Cultural Trip

16 students traveled to Quebec City for four fun-filled days over February break! Students enjoyed lots of walking, exploring Old Quebec, sledding by the Chateau Frontenac, skating at night, and lots of poutine and maple taffy! Students also traveled along the Beupre Coast where they toured the Basilica of Sainte-Anne-de Beupre and Montmorency Falls which were spectacular!

FrenchAbby Van Hoewyk & Christelle McKee, Teachers

We have been very busy celebrating Francophone culture in French classes! We learned about "Le Chandeleur", a holiday that is celebrated by eating crêpes. We celebrated by making (and eating!) crêpes in class. They were délicieux!

We also celebrated Mardi Gras by feasting on King Cakes. For this holiday, a plastic baby is hidden in the cake, and whoever finds the baby is the King or Queen of Mardi Gras for the day.

Next up for French class is our annual music competition, Manie Musicale, which is inspired by college basketball's March Madness. We listen to 16 different French songs, and along with more than 5,000 other schools worldwide, we vote for which song is our favorite. Everyone is welcome to participate, and there will be prizes! See Madame Van Hoewyk or Madame McKee in Rooms 227 and 228 for a bracket! You can find QR codes to the Playlist outside the French rooms, or click here! Completed brackets are due March 6th...if you miss the deadline, don't fret- you can still check out the songs and see how you like them!

WHAT'S YOUR PLEDGE? TRANSPORTATION

SUSTAINABILITY: WE'RE ALL IN THIS TOGETHER PART 5

Despite how it can feel some days, no one of the school community — staff, students, custodians, food workers — actually lives on campus, so all have to make choices in how to get from home to school at least 180 days per school year. Making a commitment to reducing the impact of transportation on the climate sometimes means walking or biking instead of driving, or carpooling to reduce the number of road miles needed to participate in any specific experience. The physical and emotional benefits of exercise and time to connect with co-riders adds even more value to these options.

No one feels that distance more vividly than the bus drivers who navigate the many winding back roads of our rural district. We are proud to have an all-electric bus as part of the fleet, giving visibility to new ways to transport without burning fossil fuels. However, ridership dropped during Covid due to concerns about public health, leading to new habits that are hard to change. Given the complexity of any individual students' life (potential before- or after-school extracurriculars, jobs, supervision over younger siblings, parents' work schedules, etc.), it's easy to imagine how having a dedicated ride makes the back-and-forth easier to manage. But it also comes at a cost, both in increased carbon footprint of all the smaller vehicles used to replace public bus transportation and increased traffic congestion and wait times on the school campus during common pick-up times. As much as possible, consider all the possible alternatives to covering the miles between home and school.

Big Art
Carolyn Brown, Teacher

Big Art worked on ink designs with meaning, using the Gestalt principle of figure-ground ambiguity. We used personal ideas, proverbs, and other sources as inspiration. We're currently working on relief block prints with the concept "SPEAK UP" - highlighting issues and ideas that are relevant. We read the articles in the U.N. Declaration of Human Rights, and discussed which ones we do follow in the U.S., and others that are relevant in today's news. For their block printed banners, students could choose inspiration from a variety of sources. We also looked at information on Earth Day, Civil Rights and other sources for ideas, and contemporary printmakers including Bread and Puppet Press.
